

July 18, 2017

EATER

Where to Eat and Drink on a Roof in New York

While sidewalk cafes and restaurant gardens pop up as soon as the temperature rises, rooftop bars also signal the official start of summer. Some of these patios offer stunning views of Midtown Manhattan and Williamsburg, while some offer a perch to enjoy a breeze and a drink before it gets too damn hot. For more al fresco eating and drinking, take advantage of Eater NY's guides to lovely outdoor restaurants and outdoor spots for sipping cocktails.

12 The Roof

The Viceroy Hotel's rooftop, known simply as The Roof, has wonderful views of Central Park. Sip on a spiked lemonade at this upscale terrace.

124 W 57th St

New York, NY

(212) 707-8008

